Millennials & the Church Research

Why Millennials Aren't Watching Your Streamed Worship

Services <https://www.barna.com/research/millennials-arent-watching/>

50% have said they have stopped attending (are not watching online) Is it live? Or is it memorex? Millennials are tech-savvy and know the difference. "They don't want to just back on the couch and fade away, they want to be active." They want more than consumption. If you can do it by yourself, it probably isn't the church. Also, some of the data shows that millennials feel that the streaming church service is too close to what we used to do in person. However, when they do go to church in person, they want it to "feel" like church and not be too hip, or too relevant, so much that it doesn't feel like church. Millennials, often have children at home, young children, and they are trying to work out the logistics of worship from home, which might be interfering with their streaming church attendance.
